REIGN OF BLUE LAWS

Logan's Soldiers Poorly Treated.

GOT SWIPES BUT NO SODA

Restaurants Ordered Closed at Seven But Later Allowed to Re-main Open.

Lycurgus' Grill room, Hart and Company's restaurant and the New England Bakery narrowly missed being closed last evening at 7 o'clock. During the week each proprietor had been given to understand that their places of business must close at 7 o'clock Sunday evenings to comply with the Blue laws.

Deputy Sheriff Chillingworth and Officer Hanrahan went to each place shortly after 5 o'clock and notified them that at 7 o'clock they must close the doors or be arrested. Later they were notified that the High Sheriff would allow them to remain open for the evening, but that on future Sundays no restaurant, cafe, bakery, nor ice cream saloon could have an open door.

The news that these places would be closed spread about town and restaurant frequenters made haste to get their dinners. At Lycurgus' a swarm of soldiers, officers and privates, filled the place, besides the regular diners and those who dropped in. Just before 7 o'clock Lycurgus got the information that they would not be closed. He had determined to keep open in any event and to test the law as his attorneys had advised him to do so. The attorneys and Lycurgus himself considered that the serving of meals was both "a work of necessity and mercy."

Mr. Ludwigen of Hart & Company had the same experience. He also had determined to follow Lycurgus' example and make a test. This will be carried out next week in case the High Sheriff makes the attempt to close him up. J. Oswald Lutted, the New England Bakery man, said he intended to close last evening but was given to understand just before 7 o'clock that he might keep open during the evening.

The Chinese restaurant keepers stated in two instances that they had been ordered to close and had no further notification that they might keep open. At 7 o'clock their doors were closed for the night. In these places where cigars and cigarettes are sold during the week, none were passed over the counter despite the entreaties of the soldiers who craved tobacco.

The barber shops were ordered to close at 9 a. m. and afterwards conducted business behind closed blinds.

The law which says that all places of business must be closed on Sundays, or during portions of the day, was carefully looked after yesterday by the police. It was so closely looked after that suffering humanity went thirsty, cigarless, and pined for the general luxuries or necessities that have heretofore been for sale on the Sabbath.

David Kaapa with some special officers scoured the town during the day watching for offenders of this old-new law. But not a door was open. The Chinese stores were close shuttered, and not even a bottle of soda water could be obtained during the middle of the day when the sun was hottest. The man who did not look after his cigar supply on Saturday night had no opportunity of replenishing it yesterday. David Lawrence's cigar store looked dismally neglected. The result was a general kick at all sides.

The troopship Logan brought 1700 soldiers. Nearly all these had money in their pockets and were allowed liberty during most of the day. They swarmed up town anxious to spend their money, to regale themselves with liquid refreshments, but what they saw downtown were long rows of closed business houses and not a door open which offered refreshment except one or two restaurants and cafes.

Intoxicating liquors were not to be had at places where heretofore those who knew, could obtain them. It was a fact however, that the soldiers found liquor in town for many of them were drunk and reeling about the streets. Despite the destruction of hundreds of gallons of swipes in Kakaako a week ago, the soldiers found a supply depot.

The foreman of the railroad construction work in Kakaako near the new Honolulu Iron Works was restrained yesterday afternoon about 3 o'clock from violating the Sunday law. He was engaged with a luna and fifteen workmen in ballasting the road with the coral rock which is dumped along the track. Policeman Kaapa found the workmen engaged in this pursuit and brought the foreman to the station in a hack where a conference was had with the High Sheriff. He explained his action on the ground that the work was a necessity as it was being done under a contract. The High Sheriff sent him back with instructions to cease laboring for the day.

At Kealahou Beach.

Kealahou beach was gay yesterday with the presence of several parties who came early and remained during the day at the private cottages which line the beach. Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Magoon, and a party consisting of Judge and Mrs. Humphreys, Mrs. Hutchinson and others occupied the Magoon cottage. Mr. and Mrs. Booth entertained at their bungalow, while Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Brown and friends rested at the Brown cottage. Dr. Wood's seaside residence is nearing completion and will be a handsome addition to those already there. Fred Harrison and family have taken up a summer's residence at their new beach home where they have been for the past three weeks.

The highest standard is found in Spruance, Stanley & Co.'s celebrated brands of Kentucky whiskeys.
